MORE WORK FOR THE RETLAW - LOMOND UTILITIES BOARD

THE PRESS regrets that its circle of influence does not take in but a mere fraction of territory under the irrigation survey. While irrigation is not so vitally important to those who cannot get water on their land, it nevertheless indirectly affects them to a sufficient extent to undertake assistance in the negotiations. We understand the survey data is now completed and if the negotiations are not carried through now it would be an expensive proposition to undertake development independent of the Lethbridge Northern project.

Personally, we feel that irrigation is the only solution of this drouth area and the expense involved is not nearly so heavy as in many irrigated districts in the States. There are irrigation plants there that cost as high as three hundred dollars an acre, and the owners consider it a paying proposition.

We are pleased to note that most of the really good farmers favor the introduction of water. While we don't hold ourselves in that class, we certainly are anxious for irrigation. We should be able to benefit by the experience in the irrigated areas surrounding us on all sides. It's coming, sure enough, but are we going to hang back and miss this opportunity?

Travers, Alta.

Editor Lomond Press:—

As you have invited subscribers to air their views about irrigation project in this district, I thought it might be well to present some of mine.

It seems that last summer when Mr. Peters spoke at Travers and other places there was not a very good understanding about the proposed system on the part of the farmers between Sundial and Bow City. This winter I have found out some things that I had not known before and there is a great deal to find out yet.

One spirit has been very prominent among those people who favored the scheme most, viz: "If it does nothing more it will help us to sell out." Readers of The Press and ratepayers of this district, if this scheme is not a success you can neither sell out or stay on the land yourselves. On the other hand, if the project is properly put through, economically and quickly, and at the same time is feasible for the major portion of the country through which it is constructed, you will not want to sell out, or if you do it need not worry you, for there is no country in Alberta or out of it more suited or better adapted to raising alfalfa and root crops under irrigation than lies between the Bow River and the Belly River.

The Lethbridge Northern project has been under discussion and at the same time preparing for some years, and had their estimates before the war broke out. The government has been endeavoring to get more land under irrigation and as a result the Sundial and Lomond branches of this system as it would be extended were surveyed last year.

What I believe should be done is to get the Retlaw-Lomond Utility Board together and appoint a committee to interview the executive of the Lethbridge Northern project. Their names and addresses could be secured from F. H. Peters, commissioner of irrigation, Calgary. This committee could find out exactly what amount of extension their canal and system could support, how it could be financed, and if possible have Mr. Peters there to discuss the matter with them.

I believe the Lethbridge Northern project should not be started at all until the people along the proposed extension have the facts and figures before them so they can vote intelligently for or against. This committee, in my estimation, should all be farmers resident on their farms, for this is a vital issue and affects those people most who came into this country ten or twelve years ago and have made it what it is, or else those who have come in here during the good years and bought land and haven't realized a living on it since.

If we are going to do anything it must be done at once for there will be on time in the spring and summer for this work and the Lethbridge Northern people will not wait very long. They want to begin work in the spring.

If this proposition is not feasible, or, another one better, then authority might be given the new municipal district council at the ratepayers meeting to investigate and report at some future ratepayers meeting, not later than necessary.

Offering these suggestions with the aim of getting prompt action and satisfactory results.

I am yours,

A Member of the U.F.A.

The Armada U.F.A. is availing itself of a series of illustrated lectures as provided by the University of Alberta Department of Extension. The first one was given on Thursday, showing the evolution of farming during the past three centuries.

Come to life, Lomond! These things are free for the asking. Why pass up everything in an incessant effort to get hold of those amightly dollars?

TRY IN LOMOND FIRST!

We desire to precede and supplement the following communication. Retail merchandising is not all maple sugar. The advent of the mail order houses a few years ago introduced a system of merchandising on a strictly cash basis. The old wholesale to retail on the credit basis is being slowly but surely pushed to the wall. It was too expensive a system, and now the live ones are running strong towards the cash. One large Winnipeg wholesale house, Stobarts, are now nothing more nor less than the Christie Grant mail order house.

It would be the height of nonsense to consider the elimination of the wholesale system, or the middleman, as some people delight to call it, but there certainly is room for consolidation and the elimination of a great percentage of the overhead charges. But we must expect to do business with our retailers on a strictly cash basis.

O O O O O

Lomond, February 2nd., 1920.

Editor Lomond Press:—

During the paper discussion under the heading "Try in Lomond First", I was busy stock-taking and was unable to take any part in it; but that being over, I decided to give our customers and people of Lomond district a few of our ideas.

We are members of a wholesale firm called the Merchants Consolidated Ltd. which is composed of about five hundred merchants in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba who have taken stock in the firm. This firm does not carry a heavy stock or send out high salaried travellers but collects samples from the manufacturers of Canada, United States and England, and holds buying conventions at which the members meet and consolidate their orders to be sent to the manufacturer. For example, suppose each member wanted 30 pairs of a certain line of shoes, an order would be sent to the manufacturer for about 15,000 pairs of this shoe. These are shipped to the warehouse in Winnipeg and distributed among the members. The prices we pay for these goods, we are informed, are the same as what the mail order houses pay for the same quality of goods. All transactions between the manufacturers, this firm and the retailers are strictly cash on delivery. Thus we eliminate the wholesalers' profit and the expenses of highly paid travelling salesmen.

As this company was organized during the war when goods were scarce and is being knocked by all wholesalers and mail orderhouse, it has not had smooth sailing, and there are some lines of goods on which there is a strong combine and it has not been able to buy yet. Nevertheless, progress is being made.

I am going to Winnipeg next week to attend one of these conventions, which promises to be the best we have had yet, as many new lines for fall are being shown.

In conclusion I would say, give us your cash and give us the turnover and you will have little need of sending your money away.

Your obedient servant,

T. E. Elliott.

O O O O O

Speaking of consolidation, what's sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander. The Lomond district uses a car load of sugar every now and again and buys it on the local freight plan. May is the month when sugar manufacturers usually get flush with their supplies. What's to hinder the Lomond merchants consolidating on a car load shipment and placing it with their customers on an f.o.b. basis. It is not necessary to cut the margin of profit, but allowance could be made for elimination of expense. We have two motives in suggesting this scheme. It would be an educational feature in public buying and it would assure the people against a shortage in preserving season. Any of you who have fruit preserved with brown sugar can appreciate the weight of this argument.

How Proportional Representation Works Out

For purposes of illustration let us take Toronto, which in 1911 was divided into five constituencies. Under proportional representation Toronto would be considered as one large electoral district electing five members. Then, by using the single transferable vote the 50,000 voters at that time in Toronto would have been able to group themselves into five groups of 10,000, approximately, each group or "quota" electing one member; so that the 30,000 conservatives would have formed three groups and elected three members, and the 20,000 liberals would have formed two groups and elected two members. As a matter of fact the conservatives elected all five members.

How is this grouping done? Let us try to visualize it in a very general way. We desire to elect 5 members. Now imagine the candidates to be spaced out at intervals on some large open space, and imagine each elector, as he arrives, walking up to and standing beside the man he prefers. It is comparatively certain that one candidate will be outstandingly popular and that a large number of supporters will soon be gathered around him. Now, as soon as this candidate has a "quota" of supporters he will be declared elected, after which, other electors who might still desire to vote for him will be asked not to waste their votes upon one already elected but to select a second choice from among the other candidates. Finally all the electors will have grouped themselves around the candidates of their choice. But so far we have only elected one. The next step, then, will be to declare defeated the candidate who has the fewest number of supporters. The voters gathered around such defeated candidate will be asked not to lose interest in the election and go home, but to make a second choice among the other candidates available. In this way the lowest candidates will be eliminated one after another and their supporters asked to make other choices, until, finally, five candidates only will remain, each of whom will have a "quota" of supporters standing beside him. In this way five groups would be formed of the electors of Toronto, each of which would obtain a representative in parliament.

Of course the voters are not asked actually to walk out and group themselves in this manner, but what they are asked to do through the single transferable vote amounts to practically the same thing. Each voter is asked not only to vote for his favorite candidate, but also to mark on his ballot paper his second third and other choices—so that in the event of his favorite candidate either receiving more support than he needs, or receiving so little as to have no chance for election, that then the vote shall be transferred to his second choice, or if he does not need it, to his third choice and so on. In this way the grouping is done automatically, and at the same time the secrecy of the ballot is preserved and no ballots are wasted.
